From Victoria University Press : Raupatu: The Confiscation of Maori Land before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Raupatu: The Confiscation of Maori Land:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Maori land confiscations By D A Booth A valuable collection of essays on the sensitive issue of colonial land confiscations in New Zealand and some of the subsequent efforts to redress these injustices. Of particular importance is the detailed approach supported by historical evidence and their refusal to see things in simplistic black and white terms taken by almost all the contributors.

A groundbreaking collection of essays by leading academics and intellectuals, this record examines the confiscation of Maori land in 19th-century New Zealand and the broader imperial context. Based on a 2008 conference entitled Coming to Terms? Raupatu/Confiscation and New Zealand History, this study examines topics associated with land confiscation, such as war, European settlements, colonialism, property rights, and politics. Contributors include Michael Allen, James Belich, Judith Binney, Alex Frame, Bryan Gilling, Mark Hickford, Vincent O'Malley, Dion Tuuta, Alan Ward, and John C. Weaver.

About the Author Richard Boast is a lawyer in the area of Maori and treaty litigation and an associate professor of law at Victoria University. Richard S. Hill is a historian specializing in policing and social control and a professor of New Zealand studies at Victoria University.
