From Federation Press : Settling with Indigenous People: Modern Treaty and Agreement-Making before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Settling with Indigenous

People: Modern Treaty and Agreement-Making:

The book describes ten contemporary, mostly Australian, agreements and treaties. The chapters detail the avenues for indigenous and non-indigenous peoples to resolve disputes and how relationships are sought, developed and maintained.

But for what it sets out to do - to provide insights into the negotiating process and reveal the capacity of Indigenous people to reach workable outcomes - it does well. It is a valuable contribution to Indigenous legal scholarship, which can tend to focus on the formal avenues at the expense of informal strategies for just outcomes. - Public Space: The Journal of Law and Social Justice, June 2008
